Leo Van Logher has trouble sitting still, pursues hobby in retirement

BY TERRY DAVENPORT
Post Staff Writer

Leo Van Logher has trouble sitting still. My father was a genius," he said as he gathered samples of the long-gone metalworker's artistry from around his Daly City apartment.

Then the white-haired man with ruddy cheeks and a wisp of a moustache rummaged through a desk drawer, pulling out 50-year-old clippings from Dutch newspapers that described awards his father had won.

Like his father, Van Logher was born in Holland, land of the tulips.

"Tulips!" he exclaimed, his Delft-blue eyes lighting up. "Let's do some research."

He put down his pipe and dashed off to find an old copy of "National Geographic" that had an article on the subject.

You see," he said, pointing emphatically at a paragraph in the magazine. "Tulips did not originate in Holland. They came from Turkey!"

Leo Van Logher is retired but you wouldn't know it. The 77-year-old is pursuing his retirement hobby of painting with the same dedication he exhibited during his career years.

"When you work for someone else, you get used to producing. I can't get out of the habit," he said. And so while he waits for the oils on one canvas to dry, he begins another and another. He usually has at least three paintings in progress at the same time.

Van Logher has produced dozens of oil paintings in the less than three years that he's been painting.

Nineteen on them are on exhibit this month on the second story of Daly City City Hall at 90th and Sullivan Avenues.

In the short time that he's been an artist, Van Logher also has won an award from the Pacific Art Guild and has had his work on view at American Savings and Loan in Westlake.

He chuckled as he remembers how one of his paintings mysteriously disappeared from the wall of the financial institution shortly after it was hung.

It was a picture of a naked female torso, half-swathed in a red cape as she lunges at a bull.

"The bank manager told me some old ladies came in and asked what THAT was doing in THEIR bank," he said with a laugh.

Most of Van Logher's artwork is colorful in a different sense of the word. He's fond of painting bright-hued flowers, birds, landscapes and people — especially clowns.

Some of his clowns are aglow with good humor. Others have sad eyes and wide, turned-down mouths.

The picture that he won a prize for is a memory from home: a tranquil scene of a windmill overlooking a stream that mirrors the fluffy clouds above.

DC council won't budge on condo law

More than 100 tenants from the Crown Colony Apartments in Daly City battled determinedly Monday night in an effort to persuade the City Council to strengthen their rights under a proposed condominium conversion ordinance.

But the council did not change a word of the ordinance, tentatively approved two weeks ago, before it was read for the second time and they unanimously passed it into law.

Pointing out that the ordinance gives tenants substantial rights and is perhaps the toughest in the Bay Area, council members urged the tenants to return when-and-if their 920-unit apartment complex is proposed for conversion.

They stressed that any developer wishing to convert rental units into condominiums must receive a use permit from the city that the council may deny if it determines such a move would not be in the city's best interest.

David Kahn, vice president for Cadillac Fair View Homes West of Newport Beach, said after the meeting that his company won't decide whether to purchase and convert the Crown Colony Apartments for a month or two.

"We have to determine if this is feasible under this ordinance," he said, noting that the ordinance would make conversion costly.

He said the very earliest conversion could begin, "under the best conditions," would be the spring of 1980.

In their fight to toughen up the ordinance, tenants first offered a letter from an attorney for the State Department of Housing and Community Development, evidence of the low availability of other rental units, and, finally, emotion-charged pleas.

Ed Davis of the Crown Colony Tenants Association read portions of the letter, written by General Counsel Ronald S. Javor, to persuade the council that it does have the power to add clauses to the ordinance that would link conversions to the vacancy rate in units.

City Attorney Albert Polonsky previously had told the council it did not have the authority to include such a clause, because Daly City is a general law city, not a charter city.

Mayor Victor Kyriakis said he would not ask Polonsky to respond to Javor's letter, unless a council member felt his prior decision to support the ordinance had been swayed by Polonsky's earlier argument. The other council members were silent.

Another tenant, George Saeger, asked the council to allow conversions only in complexes where two-thirds or more of the tenants favor such a change and to protect tenants from retaliatory eviction.

Polonsky said tenants already are protected under state law.

The council also refused requests that they delay action on the ordinance until the city studies it further. Kyriakis said the city already has spent substantial time studying it at the staff, Planning Commission and City Council levels.

One of those who requested a delay was an attorney from the Legal Aid Society, Pat Kerighan, who argued that the ordinance is inconsistent with Daly City's General Plan and does not set clear standards for the council to follow when considering requests for conversion.

"If you don't take a stand right now about the shrinking availability of rental units, I'm afraid you're going to get to a point where you can't do anything," she advised.

Councilman William Schumacher replied, "It's not like the International Hotel. We're not removing units from the marketplace; we're changing the nature of the units."

But Ms. Kerighan noted that the council might reach a point where it wouldn't wish to approve any more — See CONDOS, Page 2

The muscle in the new condo ordinance

Daly City's new condominium conversion ordinance is one of the toughest in the Bay Area.

One major provision of the ordinance is that current tenants are entitled to remain in their apartments without a raise in rent for at least 10 months.

In order to convert rental units, an owner must file extensive paperwork with the city, noting the condition of the units, the proposed life of every part of the units and a maintenance plan.

The owner also must install separate utility meters and meet all current building code requirements.

One of the most stringent provisions is the requirement that owners meet the city's off-street parking standard of two spaces per unit.

If the council finds, following a public hearing, that the owner has met the conditions of the ordinance to its satisfaction, it will approve a use permit allowing conversion.

That use permit may be revoked if the owner does not live up to the terms under which it was approved.

The council has a great deal of discretion in deciding which units may convert. One portion of the ordinance says the council must find that the conversion "will not have a detrimental effect on sound community planning, the economic, ecological, cultural and aesthetic qualities of the community, and on public health, safety and general welfare."

Cable TV law proposals disturb north city managers

Most city managers in the North County are adamantly opposed to two pieces of legislation that would diminish the power of local governments to regulate cable television.

Cable TV franchise owners have doubts about the bills, too.

Both bills are offered as alternatives to the current law, under which city and county governments may issue franchise licenses to cable systems and approve or deny requests by the franchisees for changes in rates or service.

One target of the city managers' wrath is a state bill, AB 699, that recently was approved by the Assembly on a vote of 55-15 and is scheduled to be heard in the state Senate's Energy and Public Utilities Committee before the legislators adjourn July 20.

AB 699 provides that rates set by cable TV systems with fewer than 5,000 subscribers would not be subject to regulation or control by a franchising city or county after initial grant of the franchise.

Rate deregulation would occur for larger systems after they made up to three channels available for public service programming.

Under the bill, the city or county franchisor could levy a fine of up to $500 for the failure of a rate-regulated cable TV company to respond promptly to complaints over preventable service problems.

The other piece of legislation is at the federal level.

Called the Communications Act of 1979 (HR 333), it is being rewritten in the House commerce subcommittee on communication.

As originally written, HR 333 flout prohibits states and local governments from regulating the rates and terms of cable television franchises.

Not surprisingly, the city managers most opposed to the two bills are those whose cities have had stormy relations with local cable TV franchises.

Albert St. Cyr, Pacifica city manager, said, "We feel regulation has to continue."

He explained that the Pacifica City Council opposes both pieces of legislation because Pacifica is dependent upon cable TV.

He estimated that 70 percent of Pacifica residents are cable TV subscribers.

"If they want to take this out of local government hands and put it under the control of something like the Public Utilities Commission, we're not opposed to that."

But St. Cyr said the council is — See CABLE TV, Page 2

Firemen fight fire in stove hood

A fire that began in the hood of a coffee shop kitchen kept Daly City firemen busy all morning Monday, fighting fire and covering expensive medical equipment threatened when the automatic sprinkler system upstairs was activated.

Firemen were called to the Westlake Coffee Shop, in the medical-dental building at 52 Park Plaza in Westlake Shopping Center, at about 8 a.m., where they said they found the grease-fed fire had traveled up a flue from the ground-floor kitchen and spread to the roof.

Damage was estimated at about $50,000, Battalion Chief Mike Orloff said.

DC housing rehabs plan splits old allies

Schisms developed between old allies Monday night over the issue of whether Daly City should embrace a housing rehabilitation program that would make a federal pool of millions of dollars available for low-interest loans.

Siding with the local chapter of the Citizens Action League, which favors the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation program, were some past and present supporters of the Original Daly City Protective Association, which opposes the plan.

The two sides offered different interpretations of what the program would mean for Daly City.

Donald Fleming, Daly City's director of community development, explained after the meeting that the project could serve double or triple the numbers of homes that qualify for repairs with low-interest loans under the city's current rehabilitation program.

He said the NRC is a non-profit corporation with a board of directors who are mostly federal officials. It was founded to fight redlining, a practice under which banks establish boundaries in which they won't lend because of the high risks involved.

By putting up about $550,000 into a revolving loan fund during the next three years, Fleming said the city's low-income neighborhoods could dip into a $600 million national loan fund for low-interest loans.

Because it is a non-profit corporation, Fleming said the NRC can sell loans into the secondary loan market, recover money and use it again for loans—thus making more money available than Daly City can under the restrictions of its program.

Fleming said there's plenty of work to be done in the four census tracts in old Daly City that comprise the city's "target area." He said the city currently figures on helping 40 city homeowners rehabilitate their homes each year and there are at least 1,200 homes that obviously need repairs.

He said he thinks NRC "possibilities" and should be investigated further.

The big question on the minds of ODCPA members Monday night was whether the NRC would force homeowners in the target area to submit to home inspections and then have to bring their houses up to current building standards.

CAL members said the council could order its building inspectors only to make inspections when requested and not to force owners to correct code violations that are found.

Heading up the CAL contingent was Zella Cashberry, who worked with ODCPA members in the past to promote a youth employment center in Daly City.

Pavellas said his group recently voted against NRC 34-7, with seven abstentions, because ODCPA members figure the NRC program would force homeowners to submit to inspections and make unwanted repairs.

He told a horror story of one Oakland woman who bought a $55,000 home and then was convinced under the program to take out a $22,000 loan.

"We are not Oakland," Pavellas said, pointing out that Daly City doesn't have the same problem finding lenders that Oakland has.

ODCPA's other co-chairman, Ernest Pezola, said CAL members change their descriptions of the program every time they talk about it.

A member of the city's Rehabilitation Advisory Committee, Harold Coker, split from his associates in ODCPA when he defended the program as having less red tape and a better turnover of money than Daly City's current program.

Pavellas replied by taking the unusual position of defending the city's program—one which he has frequently criticized in the past. He said people give the city's program, operated with federal Housing and Community Development Act funds, "an A-plus."

Councilman William Schumacher emphasized that the key question is whether code inspections can be voluntarily enforced.

"Suppose a building inspector cites a resident for code violations. How do we discipline that Civil Service employee for following state law?" he asked.

Mayor Victor Kyriakis added, "Not discipline—the question is: How do we ignore it?"

The council finally referred the matter to the city staff for further study. A report to the council is due in late August.

Guyana massacre changes political scene

By DUANE SANDUL

On a tiny airstrip in a country where few people had heard of the shape of San Mateo County politics was irreversibly altered.

The world has put into the background, Guyana, the assassination of Congressman Leo J. Ryan and the mass suicide-murder of more than 900 followers of the false messiah, Jim Jones.

But San Mateo County lives with the consequences. Its political lineup is still jockeying in the aftermath.

Ryan's untimely death, coupled with some new political stars, has changed the course of politics in San Mateo County.

The shift began quietly last summer, when little-known attorney Bob Naylor of Menlo Park declared for the Assembly seat being vacated by Dixon Arnett.

Bill Royer, then a county supervisor, had been eyeing the seat. But Naylor beat him to the punch. Though Royer supported Naylor vigorously in the campaign, there were some who suggested that Royer himself had been miffed by Naylor's quick announcement.

A Royer-Naylor battle in the primary probably would have divided Republicans as widely as the Bob Bury-Chris Cobey primary split Democrats.

But Royer announced that undeclared family considerations would keep him from challenging Naylor.

Naylor, it turned out, crushed Chris Cobey last November.

In the same election, two-term Sen. Arlen Gregorio, D-Menlo Park, lost his 10th District seat in a stunning nip-and-tuck race with political novice Marz Garcia.

Days later, Leo Ryan was assassinated.

Among the first to declare for Ryan's seat was Royer. Republicans supported him enthusiastically, bridging whatever unspoken animosity had surfaced between Naylor and Royer supporters.

The Democrats, though, stood mostly mute, watching San Bruno attorney George Corey and former Ryan aide Joe Holsinger slug it out for the Democratic nomination.

Holsinger won easily.

But Joe Holsinger was an outsider — an aide. Though he was loyal to Ryan, he wasn't Ryan, and his support in the general election last April was nominal. Predictably, Holsinger lost to Royer.

Suddenly, another important elected position was vacant — Bill Royer's seat on the county Board of Supervisors. The term expires Jan. 2, 1981.

Royer muddled Redwood City's political waters by naming Michael J. Barrett, the city's mayor, to his congressional staff. Barrett, at 29, was already regarded as a heavy weight in county politics. Many believe that he could have won a race for Royer's seat.

The vacancy created in Redwood City notwithstanding, the Barrett appointment created a scramble for Royer's seat.

Barrett, and thus, unofficially Royer, tossed his support to Mario Biagi, a shrewd, well-schooled councilman in Redwood City.

Larry Armstrong, executive director of the watchdog of San Mateo County government — the Governmental Research Council — soon thereafter tossed his name into the fray.

Though both Biagi and Armstrong are Republicans, Biagi figured to win the support of politics-wise backers.

On the Democratic side, Anna Esch — new boss for the county Democrats — announced her candidacy. But it was dealt a blow when Herb Rhodes, a black former councilman in East Palo Alto and a one-time opponent of Royer's, announced his candidacy.

Others, like Cliff Boxley of the "Probe" community organization, John Cooper of the sheriff's office, nurse Phyllis Burton and Economic Opportunity Commission member Esther Rascon, another unsuccessful Royer foe, also announced their candidacies.

But the battle, observers predicted, would focus on Biagi and Rhodes, or Biagi and Armstrong.

Suddenly, surprisingly and dramatically, that prediction was altered this week. Arlen Gregorio, scraping himself up from the mat of political disgrace (a defeat to an unknown) announced that he too is a candidate for Royer's seat.

Now, with Gregorio's name recognition, the question is: what will the impact be on the race? Will Gregorio be the front-runner? Does Biagi have too much of a seasoned head-start by his vigorous, yet behind-the-scenes jockeying for support? Will Gregorio's candidacy knock out Esch? Will Rhodes hurt Gregorio? Can Gregorio recover from a political embarrassment? Can Biagi overcome the name recognition of Gregorio? Can Armstrong bank on his "observer" role to surprise all candidates? Can Esch bank on a "time for a woman" platform, and surprise everyone?

The answers are unknown. But the questions are raised because of what happened on a tiny airstrip in Guyana eight months ago. In San Mateo County, they remember.

of a gristmill, in the San Mateo County Fair this summer.

It was an odd set of circumstances that brought him to Daly City, his home for the past 20 years.

Born in The Hague, he began learning his father's business of metalworking from the time he was knee-high.

The family business, begun in 1821, was a well-respected institution that decorated some of Europe's finest churches and office buildings with gold, silver and copper work.

"I'm just a flunkie compared to my father," Van Logher said as he showed some handsome copper cups he had hammered from a single sheet of the metal.

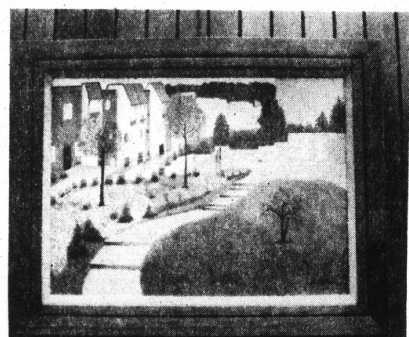

But, at the age of 23, he had a falling-out with his father, who didn't approve of the woman he wanted to marry. So the younger Van Logher went to Canada and married her.

We were two stubborn Dutchmen," he said, shaking his head. Fortunately, they patched up their disagreement later on.

After he arrived in Vancouver, Van Logher worked for Canadian Pacific Railway for six years as the company's only silversmith, repairing all the fancy tableware used in its hotels and on its trains and steamships.

One of his biggest tasks was fixing up all the silverware, trays and tea services at the Vancouver Hotel in time for Prince Edward's visits.

Friends kept telling him his services would be better rewarded in the United States, so Van Logher finally came to San Francisco in 1930 and began a series of jobs as a metalworker for local companies.

He owned his own metalworking shop for a short time, but it burned down.

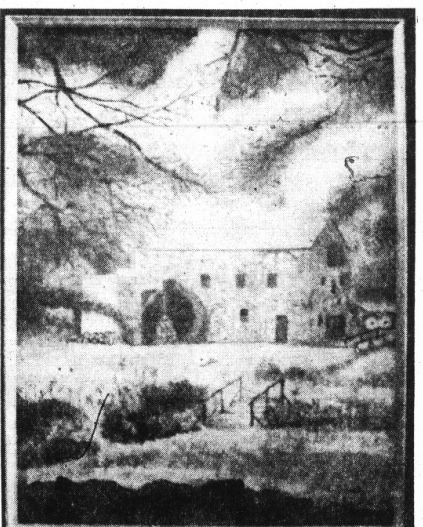

Back in the old country, his father's business also disintegrated during World War II.

The Germans came and finished that," he said bitterly.

In 1960, Van Logher abruptly changed careers on the advice of his doctor, who told him he should get away from the fumes he breathed as a metalworker.

Always fond of animals, he ran the Westlake Pet Shop on Southgate Avenue for the next 15 years.

When a new buyer bought the building and raised the rent, he decided to sell his business and retire.

OFF TO THE FAIR
Van Logher plans to enter this picture of a gristmill in the San Mateo County Fair.

His wife had recently died and Van Logher remembers thinking, "What do I want with a shop alone?"

His only relative in the area, daughter Nancy Wilson, had a life and family of her own.

That's when he took up painting. "I think anyone can be a painter if they just take the trouble to get started," he said.

His only previous experience had been a short period in 1959 while he was recovering from an operation.

It's good therapy," Van Lo her explained.

So now, most mornings, he heads down the hall of his apartment building to his little studio, puts on a plaid shirt, spreads out paints and brushes and gets right down to work.

opposed to total deregulation because, "We feel, unlike some things where you can shop around, with cable TV, you can't."

Daly City City Manager David Rowe expressed similar concerns.

"The loss of local control would be most unfortunate for the citizens of Daly City," he said. "In certain areas of the city, cable TV is a necessity for adequate reception. The idea that a cable company can charge whatever the traffic can bear is a great disservice to the people of Daly City."

South San Francisco City Manager Walter Birkelo said he's never polled the City Council on the question but personally opposes both bills.

"My basic problem is in unilaterally taking away something that has been under local control," he said. "Maybe local officials are better suited to making those kinds of decisions."

Like the three city managers, the League of California Cities also opposes both bills.

But one area city manager, Millbrae's William Huston, said he had a "mixed reaction" to the proposed legislation.

"On the one hand, it takes out of the hands of the city regulation of a function that's been very difficult," he said. "In our case, the city spent lots of time working out a revised agreement. We feel we're at the point where it's going to work and it would be a shame to lose that now."

"On the other hand, it's been a pain in the neck. So it would be nice for someone else to take over...maybe it would free time that we could spend on other issues."

David Thomas, chief technician of San Bruno's city-owned Municipal Cable Television, said the legislation would not affect that city's cable TV operation, which is the only municipal system west of the Mississippi River.

Although three local cable TV franchise managers said they generally favor deregulation of their business, all said they feared the two bills being discussed might have strings attached that would hamper them.

Jeffrey Smith, manager of the franchise in Pacifica, called AB-699 "a trade-off type of bill."

In return for deregulation, he explained, the bill requires stations to offer locally originated programs.

"I don't mind being regulated, I just want to be regulated by a group of people who know our business," he said.

James Stowell, president of Western TV Cable, which serves South San Francisco, said, "We're not particularly happy with access which is mandated, especially if it's at all orchestrated by the government."

He explained that AB-699's requirement for locally originated programming could be a financial burden that franchisees would be forced to pass along to subscribers.

The charge for cable TV in San Mateo County currently ranges from $6.50 to $9.50 per month.

One portion of the federal legislation makes him particularly unhappy: a clause demanding that cable TV franchisees obtain "retransmission consent" from the carriers of shows before broadcasting them.

According to Stowell, that would take too much time and would limit programming available to the public.

Yet Stowell isn't happy with the present system.

He pointed out that rate increases may be denied by city councils because they are "political animals," eager to make their constituents believe they are protecting them from being ripped off.

He said, "I believe deregulation can work, because in most areas there are enough TV signals receivable that people do not need to have cable TV. It is a luxury, not a necessity. Deregulation allows the operator to modify his product and its price so he can achieve profitability and provide customers with more of what they want."

Like Smith, Barry Marshall, general manager of Peninsula Cable TV, Inc., termed AB-699 a "trade-off" of dubious value to lower companies, which is a subsidiary of Telecommunications Inc. and serves Millbrae, San Mateo, Belmont, Redwood City and San Carlos.

He said, "Virtually all of our rates are deregulated and have been for some time — except for San Carlos, and we've had no great problem negotiating rates there — so it (AB-699) does not really impact us."

Like Stowell, he opposes the retransmission consent clause in the federal bill.

"Its ultimate result is that somebody other than the consumer would have the decision-making power on what's being carried on cable TV," he said.

"What we as an industry want is to let the marketplace determine our rate structure and what people get for that fee," he said. "We would like to be in a position to operate as any other business would, and to provide a quantity of services at a certain price and, if that price is too high and the services not to the liking of customers, to adjust it on the basis of supply and demand."

The consensus among those interviewed is that some form of cable TV deregulation is inevitable, whether they like it or not.

In fact, a state Senate bill (SB-

How will state meet future energy needs?

How do you provide energy to an ever-growing California?

That question is the cause of often violent debate between two great forces in the state—the Sierra Club and Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Caught somewhere in the middle, like the ham in a sandwich, is the California Public Utilities Commission, which is responsible for controlling power generation industries and their growth.

At Thursday night's meeting of the North San Mateo County Council of Cities in Pacifica, representatives of the PUC, PG&E and the Sierra Club offered dispassionate descriptions of their points of view on California's energy future.

Richard Gravelle, a member of the PUC, told the council that the nuclear power plant at Rancho Seco near Sacramento is expected to return to full capacity by this week-end.

"If Diablo Canyon (nuclear power plant) does not go on line and if Rancho Seco is closed down, the financial effect is going to be felt by the rate payers and consumers in California," he said.

The options of the PUC narrow with the removal of the sources of power within the system," he said.

We can use more oil or purchase power from other sources. But the bottom line must be paid by the consumer.

The problem we face as public representatives is to constantly try to keep the margin of generating capacity from getting too narrow."

He pointed out that "this state is extremely dependent on natural gas for power," noting, "1.75 trillion feet of natural gas annually is consumed by California out of 20 trillion nationally." Gravelle said that the PUC is in a "no-win situation. No matter what we do, we antagonize some segment of the population."

Bruce Williams of PG&E said "Whenever California's energy is discussed, it's an either-or topic: hard technology (nuclear power, oil burning, etc.) versus soft technology (conservation, solar power, etc.)"

"I think our solutions lie along a parallel path."

"We are going to have to conserve. But the soft technology path alone will not solve the problem."

Every plant now under construction, including Diablo Canyon, must be put into operation "to keep pace with energy requirements."

He added that planning must be completed on future proposed sites so that, if the need is established for future plants, the sites will be approved and available. "If, however, soft technology works out, the sites won't be necessary," he said.

Elmer Larsen, speaking for the Sierra Club, said that "our energy, life, and economic systems are so totally interwoven that we will have to make adjustments throughout."

The economic system is based on a return on capital investment on a short-term basis. Energy is low priced on the short term. But on the long term, solar energy would be more feasible economically."

As the price of energy rises, entrepreneurs will cash in when solar energy is more feasible."

In other business, the council unanimously selected Al Teglia, Daly City councilman, to be next year's chairman, with Gene Danahy, Colma councilman, the vice chairman.

Teglia succeeds Milbrac Councilwoman Mary Griffin.

The council also welcomed Foster City as a new member of the organization.

STATEMENT OF LUCKY STORES' PRICING AND MERCHANDISING POLICY

This new discount pricing and merchandising policy offers lower everyday prices on virtually every item in the supermarket. Substantial price reductions are possible because of the shortening of store hours, the streamlining of store operations, and the elimination of trading stamps or other merchandising gimmicks which add to the cost of food.

There will be no change in the quality or selection of merchandise. This discount policy maintains that low everyday prices will be in effect 365 days a year, and a customer need not rely on weekend specials, loss leaders or other bait advertising, but may shop and save any day she chooses.

This policy was printed January 12, 1967 announcing Lucky Stores Discount Pricing Policy.

AND IT'S STILL IN EFFECT. COMPARE ... AND SAVE ...

When it comes to Low Everyday Discount Prices in all Departments ... LUCKY HAS IT!

THE THOMAS LOGANS
(Laura Ramstetter)

Honeymoon at Grand Canyon

Ramstetter-Logan
Honeymooning in the Grand Canyon before establishing a home in Redwood City are Thomas Logan and his bride, the former Laura Ramstetter, who were married at St. Bartholomew's Catholic Church in San Mateo.

The Rev. David Burns performed the mid-afternoon ceremony for the daughter of Joanne Ramstetter of Daly City and the son of Paul Ramstetter of San Francisco who escorted his daughter to the altar.

When Laura said, her vows, she was dressed in a floor length organza and Venice lace gown featuring a Queen Anne neckline and bodice, long, full sleeves with deep cuffs of the same lace, and a chapel length train. Members of her bridal party wore baby blue halter dresses with capes.

Anne Ramstetter was her sister's honor attendant and Genie Ramstetter, Maureen Long, Francisca Vanderstuy and Linda Hagarty were the bridesmaids.

Sarah Ramstetter performed flower girl duties for her aunt's wedding.

Best man for Thomas was Walter Feldmann while John Logan, the bridegroom's brother, shared ushering duties with Larry Lake, Robert Balliet and Steven Sisk.

Immediately after the rites the newlyweds greeted guests at a reception at the Foster City Recreation Hall.

A radiologic technologist at Mills Memorial Hospital, the bride earned her associate arts degree from Canada College. She also has a brother, Greg Ramstetter.

The bridegroom, an Aragon High School graduate, studied accounting at the College of San Mateo. He is co-owner of Antones Construction in San Mateo. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Pritchard of San Mateo are his mother and stepfather, and Lauri Logan and Jenny Stewart are his sisters.

Joan Cella, Tautenhahn wed

Family and friends of Joan Marie Cella and Fred Tautenhahn gathered recently to witness the couple's marriage at the Congregational Church of San Mateo.

The newlyweds, who are honeymooning at an undisclosed site, were honored after the ceremony at a reception at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in San Mateo. They will make their first home in San Mateo.

For her wedding, Joan chose a candlelight chignon gown with an applique and beaded lace bodice. The dress, which also featured ruffled French embroidery on English net at the stand-up neckline, was styled with a flowing sheer chiffon skirt which had a bustle-sweep chapel length train.

Joan added a hat that was accented with Alencon lace and a delicate floral spray which secured a Dior bow and cascading silk illusion streamers strewn with tiny blossoms.

Maize colored organza over taffeta gowns with spaghetti straps and accordion-pleated skirts with deep ruffle flounces were chosen by the bride party which completed their look with matching maize colored picture hats.

The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath, and her attendants chosen baby white carnations, yellow roses and baby's breath.

Lorrie VanHecke and Susie Benveniste served as maid and matron of honor respectively. Bridesmaids included Carol Rinaldi, Maryann Baker, Kay Allman and Mary Jane Bryan. Jodi Gholson was the flower girl.

Fred asked Guy Tautenhahn to be his best man. His brother, Richard Tautenhahn of Los Angeles shared ushering duties with Ron Benveniste, Roy Shimeck, Jack Hogan and Harvey Borlaugh. Jason VanHecke carried the rings.

The bride, daughter of Frank Mannion Sr. of San Francisco who gave her in marriage, is the owner of Churner's School for Cocktail Waitresses. She was graduated from Balboa High School. She is the sister of Jack Mannion and the late Frank Mannion Jr.

Fred, who studied manual arts in Los Angeles, is a veteran of the Marines and served in the Korean War.

Vince's now open for business

You can be sure that everything is back in high gear at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant, along with the adjacent FRESH FISH DEPOT. Owner NINA LICATA and Manager son TONY close to a month so all their loyal employees could enjoy a good vacation. They're all looking forward to welcoming you back. Somehow a sandwich, plate of spaghetti or a robust breakfast of lamb and eggs seems to taste better when enjoyed in the relaxed atmosphere of a comfortable place where everything, and often everybody, seems nice and mellow. At least, that's the way a lot of "regulars" seem to feel about JOHN'S PLACE, known as "The workingman's bar" in Burlingame. Still no clue as to what new development is expected in LEO'S WHISTLE STOP in Belmont. Energetic owner LEO MARTAY says he will have an important announcement in a week or so. For something out-of-the-ordinary this Sunday, take a little jaunt to the coastside with its sparkling surf and exhilarating air. Then stop by TILLY'S 'LIL FRANKFURT German and continental restaurant in Moss Beach, where warm-hearted hospitality pervades the atmosphere and a robust home-cooked breakfast special only $2.50. GARE SAINT LAZARE, a quaint little French restaurant located in the Railroad Station in Burlingame, will be closed for vacation until August 1. In the beautiful Japanese language, "Koharu" means "early spring" and represents the beginning of things new and fresh. That's just what KOHARU Japanese restaurant is being to downtown San Mateo with the Grand Opening of this charming luncheon and dinner spot on 4th Avenue. Owners TED and HOSE, OSAKI welcome you to drop by and celebrate the beginning of a peaceful and relaxing dining experience.

Rickshaw Corner's cuisine draws raves

RICKSHAW CORNER, a new Chinese restaurant in Foster City's Edgewater Place Shopping Center, is drawing raves from those who know the difference in the various cuisines of China. You can choose from Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin and Cantonese style food. Dinner served from 4:30 to 9:30 p.m. seven days a week, with banquets and parties also arranged. A steak is not just a steak when you order the special New York Steak (South American style) at ROMANO'S Italian restaurant in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. The menu at PHIL LEHR'S STEAKERY, on the lower level of the S.F. Hilton Tower, goes far beyond the usual steak house fare. In addition to Phil's famed Pay-By-ounce steaks, there are gourmet flamed-at-the-table specialties such as Steak Diane and unexpected treats like Rack of Lamb Wellington for two. Fresh flowers, gleaming linen napery and Parisian paintings provide a casual yet elegant setting for delightful dining at LOUIS FRUTSCH'S L'AUVERGNE French restaurant in Atherton/Redwood City. The "dinner specials," Prime Rib, Roast of Chicken, Veal Parmigiana ($3.95), at ALFREDO'S restaurant in San Mateo have proved so popular that owner ALFREDO ROJAS figures he should remind you that he also offers a complete Italian menu, plus fresh fish, homemade soups, sauces and desserts.

Plan to have lunch at Lehr's Greenhouse

On your next shopping expedition to San Francisco, plan to have lunch at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE on Sutter St. near Union Square. It's a beautiful garden in full bloom where you can relax in a white wicker gazebo beside a splashing fountain, sip a Fresh Strawberry Daiquiri and feast on Crepes a la Reine or a refreshing "Alani" salad. ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB, a show place dining spot in the heart of San Francisco's Geary St. "Theater Row," is noted for generous portions, but be sure to save room for the luscious English Trifle dessert. Overseeing the kitchen operation and serving to the comfort and service of his customers is a fulltime job for CHRIS VLASSIS, owner of LA PINATA in downtown Burlingame. Guess who is back behind the bar at JIM SNADECKI'S SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S, a Lido luncheon, who was bartender here for several years before taking his leave two years ago, is again mixing those cool libations for happy crowds in the lounge of this Redwood City restaurant. Nights are fun at BAYHILL LOUNGE in San Bruno. If you feel like dancing, then get up and go at it on the intimate dance floor. You'll find fun-lovin' people come from all around to enjoy the sociability here. New hours: Monday through Friday 11 a.m. to 2 a.m., Saturday 4 p.m. to 2 a.m., closed Sunday (except for private parties).

The King's Table books new group

NORM LARSON, owner/host of THE KING'S TABLE in Redwood City, reports that starting Friday the 13th the exciting group of BOB JOYCE & SUNNYSIDE will be entertaining for dancing on Friday and Saturday nights from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. In response to popular demand, SALVATORE PAVA, owner/chef of LA BELLA PASTA Italian restaurant on the boardwalk overlooking the lagoon in Foster City's Edgewater Place Shopping Center, announced that lunches, which were heretofore by advance arrangement only for groups, are now being served to the general public from 12 noon to 3 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays. Salvatore is also offering a "dinner special" of $1 off any main course entree from now through August 5. Last we heard, GONG'S Chinese restaurant in San Francisco was still daily offering delivery service on foot. Call in an order and have it rushed to you piping hot. Maximum service to his customers is Owner JOHN CHIANG's aim. No matter when you feel like going to NICK'S famous restaurant on the edge of the ocean at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, you'll find it open seven days a week. On Sunday mornings, it's breakfast by the sea. Wednesday through Sunday evenings it's dinner-dancing in the glamorous lounge on the smooth sands of JIMMY FINGER, with song and style by popular MARY ANN HAY on weekends. FREDDY SERAFINO, FINGER's answer to King Tut, is one of the newcomers to the famed Broadway nightspot. Besides delighting audiences with his exotic dances and costumes, Freddy is a member of the Pinnocchio EYE-ETTES, seen several times in the four shows nightly, except Mondays.

Did you graduate from Balboa High School in San Francisco 40 years ago? If so, there are two reunions that might interest you.

Mrs. Emily Sumrall, president of the Balboa Alumni Association, reported that the graduating class of Spring 1939 will hold its 40th reunion at the South San Francisco Elks Club Sept. 29.

Members of the reunion committee are working on the details for the dinner-dance and attempting to track down the long-scattered members of the class.

For information, or to make your whereabouts known to the committee so that you can be a part of the event, write Mrs. Lorraine Von Krakau Berto, care of the Alumni Association, 30 Cameo Way, San Francisco 94131.

If you graduated in the fall of 1939, you should be aware that a class will hold its reunion Jan. 26, 40 years, to the exact day, from the time you were graduated.

Center's special events

Johnny Kemm, internationally known organist, will appear in a special free program of organ music at Serranotte Shopping Center July 15.

The program, featuring music from semi-classic to popular, will be at 2:30 p.m. and again at 3:30 at the center fountain.

In addition to playing more than 200 concerts per year, Kemm also has found time to record six popular organ albums currently available (some of which will be given away during the concert) and has earned the distinction of being the nation's most popular male organist, according to a recent national poll by the Organist Magazine.

A blanket of begonias will cover the fountain court at Serranotte July 28-29 during the San Francisco branch of the American Begonia Society's 20th annual show.

The floral extravaganza will include a wide range of begonias from tuberosus to brilliant Rex and many other interesting varieties of all sizes of leaves and judged for excellence in quality.

Now rally 'round the lefties

"Dear Sir: I want to belong to a minority, but I'm male straight, blond and have a Scotch name. The only distinguishing thing about me is I'm left-handed."

There you have it: I am left-handed, too. Let us start a society for the protection of the rights of left-handed people. It is a natural; about one out of every 24 people is either left-handed or has some left-handed traits.

We'll bring the lefties to San Francisco and take over an area of the city for our pads; how about St. Francis Wood or Presidio Terrace? We will repair the buildings in luminous colors and decorate the walls with the letter "L" for "left-handed," of course.

In fact, we'll enclose the letter "L" in a circle and use it for our symbol. We will make it into jewelry and wear it around our necks or in our ears. We will paint it on the walls of San Francisco's biggest buildings and splash it all over the Golden Gate Bridge.

We will make flags bearing our symbol, "L," and demand that they be flown next to the Stars and Stripes. And, yes, we will write a new anthem and demand that it be sung during all public meetings.

Then we will march down town, burn our symbol into the lawn before the Civic Center and destroy six police cars. We will demand that one out of every 24 government servants be a left-handed person. We will embark on a crusade to get left-handed people appointed to executive positions. Of course we will demand that Harry Truman's picture replace George Washington's on the dollar bill because Truman was left-handed while Washington was "common trash."

To give us our rights, the publishers will have to rewrite the dictionary to get rid of definitions which equate left-handedness with being morganatic, clumsy, awkward, insincere, and malicious. Instead of these definitions the lexicographers will have to use words such as, extra bright, graceful and true blue to define left-handedness.

And then we will have to stop thinking of the word "right" as being a synonym for being correct. No sir, we can't have that! It's an abrogation of the rights of left-handed people.

While we are about it, let's get rid of "southpaw" because that implies that left-handed people have an animal characteristic and that left-handed people always face south.

Every month or two we will rally in Golden Gate Park so politicians can solicit our support and our vote because we are the new minority, as we have proudly declared.

A proportionate number of candidates will have to be left-handed or we will be represented.

Every teacher in the schools will have to lecture for at least 10 hours at a time to convince the kids that left is beautiful.

History books will have to be rewritten to show how many lefties fought in the Revolution and how many came West.

We will call up the memory of all the left-handers who pitched for the major leagues or those who threw passes for professional football or those who boxed Joe Louis.

Then we will write biographies about them to prove that they were the personification of everything that is good and noble; of course we will erect statues to their memory.

Yes sir! Lefties arise! The time has come to stand up for your rights — whoops — mean your "lefts." Henceforth right will mean wrong and left will stand for correctness and for adherence to duty; obedience to lawful authority; freedom from guilt; ideal, highly moral and that which is suitable and just.

June was a month of celebrations

By ARVILLE FINACOM

Last month was filled with celebration. Early in June, San Francisco's Public Library reached 100 years of age. At month's end, the city itself celebrated its 203rd anniversary by founding by De Anza with a full week of festivities.

Along with these big ones, celebrations also marked a seventh and a 45th anniversary. June 5, World Environment Day, began as an annual event in Stockholm, Sweden, at the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in 1972.

On June 29, at the end of nationally observed Park and Recreation Month, the East Bay Regional Park District commemorated 45 years of public service in an urban environment with nighttime ceremonies at Tilden Park Meadow.

Hosted by Radio KNBR's Carter B. Smith, the 500-plus participants sampled birthday cake, enjoyed entertainment by clowns, puppeteers, a juggler and musicians, then went home with free balloons after listening to short speeches by 12 dignitaries including Stewart L. Udall, former secretary of the Interior under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

Udall's presence was exceptionally fitting since, as chairman of the board of OVERVIEW, a community planning organization involved in development of the EBRPD Master Plan in 1972-1973. "As I said at the time," Udall reminisced, "I'm an action planner. I want to work for a plan that we can carry out."

In his Master Plan dedicatory comments in 1973, Udall spoke to this sense of action. "The East Bay still has environmental assets — and future conservation options — which have already been sacrificed or foreclosed by most other large metropolitan areas in the pell-mell pursuit of progress." The last large scale decisions regarding the (local) environment will be made in the 1970s.

Udall admitted it was interesting "coming back six years later" to find that conservation action had EBRPD lands have doubled. "A tremendous achievement," Udall remarked in listing current EBRPD holdings of 52,000 acres in 41 parks in Alameda and Contra Costa counties including 23 miles of San Francisco Bay shore, an area as large as the state of Rhode Island and five times the size of Manhattan Island.

That park size has increased so dramatically, Udall finds in keeping with the forward-looking spirit he identifies with the Bay Area. By developing a corollary to the Biblical Proverb, "Where there is no vision, the people perish," Udall emphasizes, "In this part of California there is a special vision of the people thrive." Comparing the EBRPD with others he has seen in some 30 years of world travel, he puts it "in a class by itself, unmatched anywhere else in the country."

In his brief comments, Udall took time to express his views on the energy crisis by challenging the concept of building bigger and better highway systems rather than biking and hiking trails which would connect park areas as well as lead into the "hearts of our cities."

Using the comment "20 million

Americans jog" as an example of how willing people are to use their own bodies' energy, he questioned, "If there were safe walking or biking routes, would people use them?"

And further, as we move into an election year, he noted, "There's an enormous constituency out there wanting to use its own energy." His concluding challenge specified, "We must make great changes and move into new directions as we come to the end of the petroleum age."

Another speaker, Wayne Thompson, former city manager of both Richmond and Oakland and now head of the environmentally concerned David Hudson Foundation of Minneapolis, also emphasized energy. As a prime mover in early development of the EBRPD, Thompson reiterated his concern that as the distance people in urban areas can travel away from their homes shrinks, there is increased need for the rest and relaxation that an urban park district offers.

Although parks development was not a major focus at the local World Environment Day celebration, energy certainly was. The 4,000 people representing a variety of life styles and backgrounds who crowded San Francisco's Embarcadero Plaza on June 5 in view of decertification specialist, Dr. Jem Hogel of Nairobi, Kenya, cheered as Gov. Jerry Brown was introduced as the "state's leading environmentalist."

Brown, who tied his comments to the worldwide theme of the environment day celebrations occurring simultaneously in 2,000 communities in 100 countries, declared it "fitting" that the Bay Area, which produced and trained the original nuclear scientists, "now export the trained people to do sustainable resources technology around the world."

In reference to his proposed $500 million "Renewable Resources Investment Fund" designed to attack a number of environmental problems evident in the state today such as salt build-up in the Central Valley, and sizeable depletion of fish and forest resources, Brown indicated that the funds could also be used to develop "sustainable energy resources other than nuclear."

Involvement is the heart of Brown's fund concept which will offer investment advantages to individuals and corporations who "buy in." So that the general public will experience a similar sense of being part of the program as well as recognize the difference between government "spending" and "investment," Brown is proposing a statewide bond issue to be submitted to the voters sometime in 1980. Further information, including a prospectus, is available from State Resources Secretary Huey Johnson, 1416 9th St., Sacramento, 95814.

In challenge, Brown summed up his comments about the worldwide significance of action here in California. "We are tied to a future that we will determine. What we have to do as a people is transcend our narrow egos and constricting political philosophies and put back into our environment resources we have taken away."

Brown's words may stand prophetic. Any commemoration of the past centralizes around concern for the future. It has been said that the hallmark of an enlightened citizenry is its concern for posterity. Today, that concern for posterity must include more than man, himself. Consider a line from folk singer Don Maclean's "Tapestry." "Every thread of creation is held in position by still other strands of things living, in an earthly tapestry hung from the skyline."

The parklands preserved for man and the resources renewed under the governor's plan are banked against the future. Only with their deposit on all our continuing today's, can we assure ourselves of any tomorrow.

Recipe for taco-people

Good morning, good cooks.

Since tacos are a great favorite with many people, this recipe that allows us to prepare a delicious taco casserole ahead is just what we need in these busy days.

- SPINACH TACO CASSEROLE
- 2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen chopped spinach
  - 1 large onion, chopped
  - 1 tablespoon oil
  - 2 pounds ground beef
  - 2 teaspoons chili powder
  - 2 cloves garlic, minced
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
  - 1 can (16 oz.) tomato sauce
  - 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
  - 1 teaspoon cumin
  - 1/2 teaspoon oregano

- One large bag dip-size tortilla chips
  - 1/2 pound Monterey Jack cheese, shredded
  - 1/2 cup sour cream
  - 1 avocado sliced
  - Ripe olives
- Thaw the two packages chopped spinach and squeeze dry.

In large frying pan, saute the chopped onion in the tablespoon oil until translucent. Add two pounds ground beef. Cook until browned. Add two teaspoons chili powder, two cloves garlic, minced, and one and one-half teaspoons salt. Stir in the 16 ounces tomato sauce, two tablespoons red wine vinegar, one-half teaspoon each cumin and oregano. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes.

Place a layer of tortilla chips in the bottom of a buttered 2 1/2 quart casserole. Shred the half pound Monterey Jack cheese.

Layer one-third the cheese, one-half the spinach and one-half the meat sauce in casserole. Cover with another layer of chips, another third of cheese and remaining spinach and meat sauce. Top with remaining third of cheese and sprinkle chips around edge of casserole.

Contract to DC firm

Congressman Bill Royer (R-San Mateo County) has announced an award of a contract from the Department of Interior, Geological Survey, in the amount of $15,900 to Pitcher Drilling Co., located in Daly City.

The contract is for drilling ridge and crew to bore test holes for geological sampling for seismic and engineering measurements.

NELL NORTON

Bake 350-degree oven for 25 minutes, or until heated thoroughly.

Spoon one-half cup sour cream on top. Slice one avocado and arrange in a pinwheel on the sour cream. Ring with ripe pitted olives.

Parents! Your child's first job could make a difference!

Look around. Some of the most successful people you know were once newspaper carriers! There's a good reason for that. Being a carrier is more than a first job . . . it's an unforgettable learning experience. It teaches young people how to use their time wisely . . . to handle money . . . to deal with different kinds of people. It gives them feelings of confidence, pride and accomplishment for handling an important responsibility reliably and well. And what's more, it's fun! Carriers get the chance to win great prizes and exciting trips and share experiences with other young people their own age. So why not talk to your son or daughter about becoming a newspaper carrier? A small part of each day can make the difference of a lifetime.

Continuing saga of Giants' trades

Ah yes, the Giants' trades. To get the easy one over with, Helly Cruz for Pedro Borbon was a steal. Borbon seldom has been a spectacular guy — in the manner of a Bruce Sutter, for example — but he has come up quickly and can pitch almost every day in a workman-like manner, as he's been demonstrating regularly since 1972.

Relievers who have been even marginally effective for that long a period can be counted on the fingers (no pun intended) of Donald Duck's hand. In a year when half a dozen Giants pitchers have been shelved with injury, illness or arm problems, a rubber-hose like Borbon's is comforting to have around.

Spec Richardson could have stopped at Borbon and maybe been a hero. But he chose to make a bold, gutsy move toward a pennant and trade away two-time National League batting champion Bill Madlock, plus Dave Roberts, his second-most effective relief pitcher at the time — for a relative unknown in Ed Whitson and a couple of genuine unknown Pitts- burgh farm hands named Fred Breining and Al Holland.

The Madlock trade to Pittsburgh should have come as no surprise. The hints were there. When the Giants originally spirited him away from the Cubs for Bobby Murcer, Pittsburgh was their toughest competition. Madlock was quoted in the Jan. 6 edition of the Sporting News as saying, "If you look at it realistically, I'm the only one they can trade."

And, perhaps not incidentally in the same issue a story on Pittsburgh trade possibilities read, "Ed Whitson, coming off a productive rookie season, would appear safe, but if a certain club twists General Manager Pete Peterson's arm and offers a right-handed pitcher, Whitson could become expendable."

When the Giants made the trade for Whitson, I wrote of his history of knee trouble and his questionable ability to play a full season. I was a little off, for last year when he chose to remove himself from the lineup for days because of a split lip.

My attitude on the trade is that any move that got Madlock off second base was a good move.

Nothing against Madlock — it's just that he was what the Giants didn't want. Last year he had outstanding pitching and an adequate offense. They lost their edge primarily, I felt, on a shaky defense on the right side of the infield. This year, obviously, their offense has been more than adequate, the right side still needed shoring up, and the pitching had been bad, especially the relieving.

I wrote a column in February in which I said that the Giants needed a solid right-handed relief pitcher and that Bill Madlock wouldn't help them unless he hit .330-340.

Madlock, more than any other element — aside from their weak relief hurling — killed the Giants in early season with his usual defense and .150 batting. Sure, the guy probably always going to be a .300 hitter, but where else could he play for the Giants? Could he move Darrell Evans off third, or McCovey or Ivie off first or Terry Whitfield out of left field?

The fact is, a .300 batting average with Madlock at a key defensive position was a luxury the Giants couldn't afford. And don't lose sight of the fact that when Madlock came to town his lifetime batting average was .337. On the day he left, it was .319. Obviously, he wasn't going to hit .330-340 in Pittsburgh, a park he openly detested, and which now had a grass infield, which couldn't help his average. Wrigley Field was a good place to hit. No good hitter has ever had a hard time hitting well in Pittsburgh. Madlock probably will hit .340 for the Pirates and help them, and they're in the other division, and good luck to Bill.

In retrospect, the most positive thing Madlock did for the Giants was to end the experiment with Jack Borbon as a third baseman. Borbon's coming to San Francisco originally as a third baseman moved Clark to right field, where he belonged.

So much for Madlock. What Giants fans have to do now is what Richardson lost: evaluate the impact of the personnel the Giants got for Madlock.

People looking at Whitson's mediocre record with Pittsburgh this season are misleading themselves. He had worked only sporadically with the Pirates. Coming up after the season opened as a rookie last year and working regularly, he compiled a respectable 3.29 ERA. He turned in several brilliant performances with his hard, working fastball.

Lost in the controversy of the trade was the fact that the Giants picked up two promising Pirate farmhands in pitchers Fred Breining and Al Holland.

Breining, a 23-year-old San Francisco native who attended College of San Mateo, admittedly didn't have a very impressive minor league record until this year, when he picked up a forkball, which he's now developing.

Holland, a 26-year-old southpaw relief pitcher who had a couple of fine minor league seasons.

Some fans are upset because the Giants gained four pitchers in the trade, but no hitters. As had already been demonstrated this season, a team never can get too much pitching. And, if they do, that's just more good trade bait for next year. If you're going to stockpile the axiom goes, stockpile pitchers and catchers. They're never out of season.

Finally, when you think about the trading of Madlock, remember that his declining has opened a new opportunity for Joe Straub, who eventually could be a bigger star than Madlock.

The place is the South San Francisco Elks Club at Hillside Boulevard and Stonegate Drive. There will be a no-host cocktail hour (or hours) at 5:30, and dinner and all the baseball stories you can handle will cost $7.50.

If you're interested in attending you can contact: Goose Gosland, 2323 — 33rd Ave., San Francisco, 94116, 731-3673; Ernest Golding, 355 Valencia Drive, South San Francisco, 94080, 868-0677; or Dick Code, 660 Crane Ave., Foster City, 94404, 973-724.

SUDDEN THOUGHTS: I still don't think Houston can make it with four rookies and a couple of virtual rookie pitchers on the roster. They're not going to be throwing shutouts down the stretch.

The Giants were worried about having four left-handers in their starting rotation. Nothing really wrong with the situation, except that the southpaws were Warren Spahn, Lefty Grove, Lefty Gomez and Carl Hubbell.

Are doubleplays overrated? The National League leaders in that department are San Diego and New York.

San Bruno wins 2 from Flying Goose in maddening play

San Bruno swept both ends of a doubleheader from host Flying Goose of Daly City at Marengo Field Sunday, creating a three-way tie for first place in the Peninsula Joe DiMaggio Baseball League.

San Bruno defeated Flying Goose 9-7 and 14-8 Sunday while Millbrae was sweeping a doubleheader from visiting South San Francisco, 3-2 and 6-2, and Pacifica was taking a twin bill from visiting John's Del of San Mateo, 4-3 and 13-6.

Millbrae, Flying Goose and San Bruno are now locked in a three-way deadlock with identical league records of 6-3. South City is 4-5, Pacifica stands at 3-6 and John's Del is 2-7. All of the league's six teams still have six games remaining on their league schedule, so the race for the round-robin title remains wide open.

Right-hander Bob Lagrill went the distance for San Bruno in Sunday's opener, then provided the visitors with strong relief help in the nightcap to register his second round victory of the afternoon. Toft Muller cracked four hits for Flying Goose in the first game, and Ken Ramos did the same for the visitors in the nightcap.

With the score knotted at 5-5 in the opener, San Bruno had the bases loaded with two out in the top of the sixth inning. Then came a play that did not do wonders for the life span of Flying Goose Coach Tom King.

Phil Piscerio (who later contributed three hits and four RBIs for San Bruno in the nightcap) hit a ground ball to second base — a ground ball destined to create all kinds of trouble and confusion for Flying Goose. The throw to first base was low, enabling Muller to score from third base. When Greg Funk, running from first to second on the play, rounded too far off the bag at second, the Flying Goose first baseman fired the ball to second; upon catching the throw, Flying Goose's shortstop, instead of tagging Funk out, threw the ball home — and fired it high off the screen.

When Flying Goose's catcher retrieved the ball, he saw Funk going toward third — and threw the ball past third and into left field, enabling Funk to score and Piscerio to take third.

When the dust had cleared, three runs had scored on the wild and decisive play. San Bruno catcher Tom Wetzel then craved a double to plate Piscerio, giving the visitors a 9-5 lead that eventually held up.

San Bruno struck early in the nightcap, scoring 10 times before Flying Goose — which still sports an impressive overall record of 20-7 — had even come to bat. San Bruno's first hitter drew a walk, and its second batter reached first safely when Flying Goose left the bag uncovered on an attempted sacrifice bunt.

San Bruno's next hitter lofted a fly ball that resulted in a collision between two Flying Goose outfielders, letting a run score — and typifying how the rest of the afternoon could go for Flying Goose. The Daly City club trimmed San Bruno's lead to 12-8 in the fifth inning, but couldn't quite overcome the winners' fast start.

Defensively, shortstops Funk and Dave Maxion played very well.

In Sunday's nightcap between South City and Millbrae at Mills High, South City led 1-0 after three and a half frames. Then came the bottom of the fourth — and a decisive rally by Millbrae.

Greg Barton and Matt Hesselgren cracked singles. On a pickoff attempt at second base, the throw went into center field, and Barton scored with Hesselgren taking third. A single by Jim Ryan brought Hesselgren across for 2-1. Jay Stelnick flied out to center, but Dan O'Leary singled to center. Then Bill Healy hit a fly into short center, and South City's retreating second-baseman couldn't quite hold it, enabling Ryan to score as O'Leary took third and Healy sped to second.

John Mangiante then gave Millbrae a commanding 8-1 lead by cracking a two-run double to left-center.

In the first game, South City's second batter, Marty Pedkin recorded eight strikeouts and walked three Millbrae hitters — but, ultimately, to no avail. Mangiante and reliever Horace Thomson pitched well for Millbrae.

John's Del led Pacifica 3-1 after six and a half innings in Sunday's opener at Terra Nova High, but the San Mateo Club couldn't quite hang on. With one run in, one out and the bases loaded, John Scolini of St. Ignace's High lifted Pacifica to victory by grounding a two-run single through the left side of San Mateo's drawn-in infield.

In the nightcap, John's Del was forever flying out. San Mateo flied out 12 times against Pacifica right-hander Rich Passalacqua.

Cal-PAL baseball

Millbrae survives Pacifica challenge

Millbrae defeated host Chuck's Chevron of Pacifica 6-5 Sunday at Terra Nova High to lift its record to 7-2 in Peninsula Cal-PAL Baseball League play.

First-place Millbrae trailed Pacifica 4-3 after five innings, but scored twice in the sixth and once in the seventh to prevail. With one out and the visiting pitcher Pedro Hernandez in the second base in the top of the seventh, John Hutchings smacked a run-scoring single down the left field line, putting Herminghaus in Millbrae's eventual winning run.

In the bottom of the seventh, Pacifica threatened when it landed two runners aboard with one out. But Flo Gonzalez, running from left-center field toward right-center, made a fine running catch of a fly ball for the inning's second out. Herminghaus then got Dan Morotto to pop out to end the contest.

Millbrae had beaten the visiting Pacifica Dolphins 24 Friday evening at Mills High before the sharp pitching of Herminghaus, a student at Hillside High, Matt Mitchell and catcher Tim Knudsen cracked RBI singles for Millbrae.

In the semifinals of the Fairfield P.A.L. Baseball Tournament at Allan Way Park Tuesday night, Millbrae was eliminated from further tournament play with a 10-9 loss to San Jose K-Mat, which then met the San Jose Phillies for the tournament championship. The day after the game, Millbrae's contest against San Jose K-Mat (which had already beaten Pacifica in the teams' tournament opener) was held at 3:30 p.m. in the evening due to a pre-determined time limit.

In another P.A.L. baseball game Sunday, Foster City — currently occupying first place in the league's Southern Division — scored four times in the bottom of the first inning and registered a 5-1 win over the visiting Pacifica Dolphins at Sonoma Field.

With two runs already across for Foster City in the first, Jim Roake slammed a triple and Joe Knak followed with a two-run homer, giving Foster City a commanding 4-0 advantage.

Roake struck out eight Dolphin hitters and held the visitors to two hits. Foster City now stands at 7-3 in league play.

Foster City, now 2-5 overall this season, was involved in a classic ballgame against Lafayette Wednesday night in the Fremont Invitational P.A.L. Baseball Tournament.

With the score knotted at 3-3 in the top of the ninth, a Lafayette hitter smacked a hard ground ball into the middle with one out and two men on base. After Foster City's shortstop Ross Heron of Hillside High back-handed the ball and flipped it back to second base for a forceout, Lafayette's next hitter grounded out to third, enabling Foster City to enter the bottom of the ninth with a 3-2 lead.

Heron then unlocked the tie by blasting a 300-foot leadoff home run to straightaway center field, giving Foster City an exciting 4-3 victory.

Soxers prep for tourney

Sanford Firestone breezed to the Pacifica Minors Bobby Sox championship last week with an 18-3 record.

Infielder Caroline Oldham and pitcher-shortstop Dawn Nishimura and Davey Buechler were the team mainstays all season. Buechler was control specialist, while Nishimura edred a no-hitter, striking out 15 of the 18 batters facing her down second-place Taco Bell this past season. Oldham was the team's power hitter, notching 11 home runs during regular season play.

Pacifica was the last of the local leagues to finish regular season play. The four other Bobby Sox county groups — San Mateo, Belmont, Burlingame and San Carlos — geared up for All-Star playoff action.

The five local Minors All-Star squads will be competing in three area and district tournaments with all games beginning this Saturday. The San Mateo Bobby Sox Minors will be hosting a seven-team area tourney at Chantelup Field on Alameda de Las Pulgas and will meet Hayward in a first-round game at 4 p.m. The Belmont Soxers will also be at San Mateo, and will clash with De Anza in their opening game at 6 p.m.

Other teams at the San Mateo tourney include Blossom Valley, Livermore, and West Valley. The winner of this tournament will meet the winner of the Campbell District tourney for a short three-game district series. The series winner will go on to Buena Park in Southern California for the national tournament in August.

The Burlingame and San Carlos Minors All-Stars will be journeying to Campbell for their games. Burlingame will open against Blossom Ridge of San Jose at 3:30 p.m. while San Carlos squares off against Foster City at 5:30 p.m.

Other teams at the Campbell tourney besides the host squad include Almaden, Blossom Ridge, and Milpitas. Games will be held at West Valley Jr. College at Third Street and Winchester Blvd. in Campbell.

Fans are asked to park in the lot east of the playing fields in Third Street. Cars parked elsewhere will be towed.

Pacifica will be the lone county entrant in the San Anselmo tourney, where they will face Sebastopol in the first round at 3:30 p.m.

The San Anselmo District tourney also includes, besides the host team, San Lorenzo, San Rafael, Hincom Valley and West San Leandro. The winner will advance automatically to the national tournament.

All five Majors All-Star squads begin play next week, July 20. San Mateo will host Belmont and six other teams. The two local powerhouses drew each other as opening-round opponents, and will clash on July 20 at 4 p.m.

San Mateo firms its Legion lead

The San Mateo Post 82 American Legion baseball team strengthened its grasp on first place over the weekend by defeating visiting South San Francisco 8-4 Saturday at Fitzgerald Field and then beating host Foster City 7-4 Sunday at Sonoma Field.

San Mateo, now 10-2 in Peninsula American Legion Baseball League play, has three league games remaining, with San Bruno (8-4) and South San Francisco (8-4) still to worry about. San Mateo Post 82 can clinch a tie for the title by beating visiting Redwood City Saturday at Fitzgerald Field.

In other American Legion league games Sunday, South City won a 12-1 thriller over host Redwood City in 11 innings at Sequoia High and San Bruno — which had beaten Redwood City by forfeit Saturday — edged last-place Pacifica 7-6.

In Sunday's game between San Mateo and Foster City, San Mateo's hitting, smacking two hits to extend his phenomenal personal hitting streak to 33 games. (Mahoney did not play in one of Post 82's 34 games.) Mahoney had ripped three hits Saturday. Tony Dalri of San Mateo cracked a triple to open the bottom of the first against South City, marking the third straight league game in which Dalri had opened the game for Post 82 with a triple.

Dalri also cracked a triple Sunday — but this time his standard three-bagger did not come in the first inning.

With South City and Redwood City locked in a 9-9 tie, Joe Allo drew a two-out walk for the visitors in the top of the 11th. Then Dwight Atienza tripled Allo across for 10-9. After John Paul was hit by a pitch, he and Atienza executed a double steal with Atienza scoring from third. Tommy Esqueda then cracked a run-scoring single to plate Paul for 12-9.

A Stunt Show In Daly City

Watch chairs, tables, bottles and other weapons crash, crunch and break over Chuck Lowe's 5 foot, 7 inch body when "The Fall Guys Stung Show" performs during Serramonte's Gold Rush Sidewalk Sale, July 14.

Besides spontaneous performances in each wing of Serramonte, "The Fall Guys," doing all manner of violence and mayhem to each other, will entertain passersby at the fountain court at 12:30 and 1:30 p.m. "The Fall Guys Stung Show" was born in 1969 at Frontier Village when Chuck Lowe ran across other compatriots who, like himself, believe the only "true American hero" kids have is the cowboy.

Vic Payne in leader training

Cadet Victor D. Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonnie Payne, 1027 Scherwin, Daly City, is receiving practical work in military leadership at the Army ROTC Advanced Camp, Fort Lewis, Wash.

The six-week training program is designed to present cadets with "hands-on" training which cannot be adequately presented on a college campus.

Upon completion of camp, some cadets will be commissioned as second lieutenants. Others will return to their schools to complete their senior year and will be commissioned upon graduation.

Red Cross CPR Class Set in DC

Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation is a lifesaving technique that anyone can learn. And if CPR is started immediately and can be correctly maintained until emergency help arrives, the victim has a good chance of recovery, according to the Red Cross.

A nine hour course will be held at Fire Station 7, 10 Wembley Drive, Daly City, on July 10, 17 and 20, from 7 to 10 p.m. There is a fee. For registrations and information call 878-9830.

St. Martin's Bible School Plans Made

'No problem' with dieting on vacation

Wednesday, July 11, 1979 THE POST *** 15

For most of us, vacation is the time to eat well without worrying over the preparation, serving and cleaning up. At least if you're the manager of a household, that's what a vacation is!

Well, if that's what a vacation is food-wise, why do so many people avoid staying on diets while two-weeking-with-pay?

I love to eat. I love to vacation, and I love to diet. Most of all I love to put the three together, to go on a vacation, enjoy my meals, and lose weight!

There's nothing difficult about it. I concentrate on not preparing the food, on having it served to me, and then — delight of delights — getting up and leaving the dirty dishes on the table.

I have discovered that wherever I travel, I am able to hold to the basic structure of my diet. No problem. I have either a glass of juice, a poached egg on one slice of dry toast and coffee or half a melon, some cottage cheese, toast and coffee for breakfast. These two menus I alternate.

For lunch, I keep my choices to three, rotating them by the day. One is an individual can of tuna, lots of lettuce, a slice of bread, and fruit; a second is grilled cheese on one slice of bread, tossed green salad, and a half melon; the third is two scrambled eggs, 1 slice of toast, salad, and ice milk.

At dinner time, I always order seafood, broiled with no butter. The plate looks full because I have two vegetables — one from among asparagus, broccoli, green beans, zucchini, or mushrooms. The other I select from peas, carrots, beets, or tomatoes. I add a tossed salad. I finish my repast with fresh fruit. Occasionally, I permit myself another serving of ice milk, but never if I have had it for lunch. And what do I prepare if I am spending my vacation at home? I'm apt to feed myself and my family something like this favorite.

STUFFED VEAL PEPPERS
8 green peppers, medium size
2 lbs. lean ground veal, minus 2 ounces
1 egg
1 onion, small, chopped
1 pkg. instant broth
1/8 tsp. pepper
dash garlic powder
dash oregano
6 ounces tomato sauce
Have green peppers lengthwise. Remove seeds and rinse. Mix lightly veal, egg, onion, broth, seasoning, garlic powder and oregano. Add 2 ounces of tomato sauce. Pile lightly into peppers. Arrange in baking dish. Pour remaining 4 ounces of tomato sauce over peppers. Cover tightly. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Tastes even better the following day when reheated.

There are more where that came from. I'll be happy to share them with you if you'll send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope. My mail comes to: THE DIET WORKSHOP, 2333 Taraval St., San Francisco 94116. Just write "Prize-Winning Recipes" on the flap.
